Siamese Creations

Discover the artistic talents of the Kingdom.

Thailand is known for its skilled craftsmen who blend artistic traditions with contemporary design. Discover a range of unique and beautiful products, including:

Thai Silk

Originating from the northeast, Thai silk comes in many varieties, including mudmee with its deep colors and fuzzy edged patterns. It is completely hand-made, and each piece - whether it's a top, scarf, or cushion cover - is unique.

You can check if an item is 100% Thai silk by considering its weave, sheen and print. Real silk contains natural fibers and shows small faults where the threads are joined. Also, real Thai silk shimmers and the print should only be visible on one side.

Pearls

Cultured pearl production is principally found in Ranong, Phang-nga and Phuket provinces. When purchasing pearls, quality factors include size, shape, luster, nacre (the shiny iridescent coating of the pearl) thickness, color, and blemishes.

Ceramics

Among local ceramics, Benjarong is the most distinct. Its delicately detailed, geometrical patterns are decorated in five colours with gold detailing. Benjarong was once reserved for royalty; today, it is enjoyed by many as formal tableware or decorative pieces.

Lacquerware

An ancient craft, lacquerware entails a repeated process of coating structural wood with lacquer before hand painting with elaborate designs. Objects such as boxes and trays are produced in either gold and black, or yellow and green on a red-brown background.

So Hot!

Pewterware

An alloy of lead and tin with a smooth feel, pewter is mostly made into beakers, goblets, and tankards depicting classical mythology or scenes of rural life.

You can find all these and more at That's Siam in Jungceylon. With nearly 200 stores, That's Siam features the best handicrafts, art objects, and souvenirs representing rich artistic traditions from all over the Kingdom.

Home of Thai Art & Crafts

Covering over 10,000 square meters in the basement level, That's Siam offers the largest selection of ethnic products from all over the Kingdom. From textiles to home furnishings, each item reflects the pride and artistry of a particular region. The space also houses a handicraft museum, a demonstration area, and an arts library.

Designed by Dulpichai Komolwanit, renowned art professor and designer of the Siam Niramit theater in Bangkok, That's Siam encompasses traditional elements in a beautiful Thai contemporary setting. Professor Dulpichai also designed numerous exhibits depicting traditional artisans' way of life, craft demonstrations, and street performances.

That's Siam is comprised of five zones: Textiles, Handicrafts & Souvenirs, Thai Massage & Spa, Craft Demonstration & Education, and Thai Foods.

Take the time to browse, finding items that catch your eye and learning how they were hand crafted. And once you have satiated your shopping fix, reward yourself with a traditional massage or some delicious coconut-based snacks.
